Minor changes to your prescribed medicines

Do you take medicines?

Your surgery may make minor alterations to your medicines.

What does this mean for me?

You may not notice a difference but the name may change or you may be prescribed a new medicine that works in the same way.

What does this mean for the NHS?

We can use the money saved on other important NHS services.

How can we reassure you?

We choose these changes carefully so we do not reduce the quality of your care.

What if I am not happy with the change?

Discuss with surgery staff or your pharmacist.

Thank you for your support
